1. For which bridge was the construction date and time strictly set?
2. What material was first used while constructing this bridge?
3. Which bridge has been rebuilt several times?
4. Why does the bridge look different from its original plan?
5. The construction of which bridge allows big ships go up and down the river?
6. Which bridge has become the symbol of the country?
7. Which bridge has got a name of a famous traveller?

A. The Golden Gate Suspension Bridge is the first sight of San Francisco that can be seen from the Pacific Ocean. Sometimes, Americans call their dear old bridge the gates of the country. Built in the time of the Great Depression, it became a sign of hope for industrial development in the USA. Its image often appears in travel brochures.

B. Like many European cities, Lisbon suffered from traffic jams. The problem was solved thanks to the construction of the Vasco da Gama Bridge. The length of the bridge is 1 kilometre and it links the different parts of the Portuguese capital. The bridge was named after the legendary explorer, Vasco da Gama, who linked Europe with other parts of the world.

C. Brooklyn Bridge in New York, USA, became famous thanks to its progressive design by the engineer Johann Robling. For the first time in history, he used steel instead of iron. Johann Robling insisted that steel was stronger and safer. To prove his idea, he suggested that the city officials walk elephants along the bridge during the opening ceremony. Soon steel became widely used in engineering.

D. One of the most famous bridges in the world, Tower Bridge, was constructed in London in 1894. It is the only Thames Bridge that can be raised to permit large ships to pass. Massive engines raise the bridge sections in just over a minute. Though Tower Bridge is a safe and reliable construction, a number of accidents have occurred when the middle section was raised too quickly.

E. Dvortsoviy Bridge across the Neva River in St. Petersburg was planned as a part of the city's architectural complex. Its design contained many decorative details, elegant street lamps and impressive sculptures. However, the initial project was never completed. After long years of construction, it was decided to give up most of the decorative elements due to economic reasons. Nevertheless, the bridge looks wonderful.

F. Charles Bridge in Prague was built for King Charles IV. Charles was deeply interested in astrology and numerology and that is why he wanted to start constructing the bridge on a definite date in a definite time. He believed in the relationship between numbers and the future. So it was calculated that the bridge would stand for centuries if its construction started at 5.31 a.m. on the 9th of July 1357. The calculations were correct. Charles Bridge has stood for more than 650 years and citizens and tourists still admire it.

Trip to Paris

My name is John Brown. The name is typically British that nobody ever asks for my nationality. And, surprisingly, I perfectly fit this stereotype — I was born in the suburbs of London, and so were my parents and even grandparents. All my roots are here, in England, except for my mum's uncle, who left for Australia many years ago. In my family, where even trips to France or Italy were considered unreasonable and a waste of money, he is considered somehow a disgrace to the family.

Due to everything mentioned above, you can understand that it was not easy for me to inform my parents that we had been invited to take a school excursion to Paris. I desperately wanted to join my class for this trip but was not sure my family would allow me to do it. To my surprise and delight, my parents said yes, and even approved of the trip as, according to them, it was the right time for me to broaden my horizons.

And my horizons were indeed broadened! The adventures started the moment we boarded the train. The Eurostar, a high-speed train, moved as fast as a plane. To tell the truth, I'd never travelled on either of them, but that's how it felt. We went through the Channel Tunnel which was amazing, thrilling, and scary at the same time. The undersea section of the Channel Tunnel is 38 km long and it's the longest undersea tunnel in the world! Going through the Tunnel makes the trip much faster than by ferry or ship of any kind but, frankly, the thought of the tons of water above made me feel a little panicky.

Anyway, that same morning, we were in the heart of Europe, ready to explore Paris. Our programme there was very intense: a bus excursion round the city, a ferryboat trip along the Seine, museums, exhibitions, and other things. There was hardly any time for breakfasts, lunches, and dinners! We had only four days and wanted to see as much of France as possible.

Certainly, the place we couldn't miss was Disneyland. It was scheduled for the last day of our trip, and for good reason! Disneyland is a place where one can spend a week or two and will never get bored — so many fun activities and attractions are offered there. Fortunately, we didn't have to waste our time on choosing the attractions. Our visit was planned and all the activities were paid for a long time beforehand.

The Temple of Doom was something that blew my head off! It's an Indiana Jones themed attraction — when you speed ahead in a mining train wagon through ancient ruins. You have to face poisoned arrows and screaming mummies, and all sorts of things. Fantastic, isn't it?

We took the train to London straight from the Disneyland station. It made our trip back about twenty minutes longer, but it was really convenient. And one more thing: the Disneyland experience did me lots of good — the journey back through the Channel Tunnel didn't scare me any more.

10. John was named after his uncle who had left for Australia.
11. John's parents were against his trip to France.
12. John travelled on the Eurostar for the first time.
13. John's trip to France lasted for four days.
14. The first place John and his friends visited in France was Disneyland.
15. The tickets for Disneyland were bought in advance.
16. John went on the Temple of Doom ride several times.
